

March 2, 2015

As I read the Six Core Fiduciary Duties, I really like them. The only strengthening I would recommend you consider is to not just disclose the "conflicts", disclose everything! What is or is not a conflict can be a bit subjective. It is amazing how we can justify our way around most anything. Therefore, if you simply say, "disclose how you are compensated", whether hourly, retainer, commission, AUM, or some combination, that provides the consumer what they need to make a well informed decision, no matter what model they are considering. I would recommend that the disclosure be in hard dollars, not %'s or basis points.

Mark Berg, CFP[®]

President

Timothy Financial Counsel, Inc.